Fashion-A-Fish

In a highly competitive aquatic environment, only the best-adapted fish will survive! Over many, many years and through many, many generations, this species of fish has become well adapted to its environment. The fish with poor adaptations die while the fish with good adaptations pass these traits on to their offspring. Your task is to draw this species of fish in its environment and label the adaptations that help them survive in this rough and tough world. Use the adaptation chart and picture examples. Then, on the back, write a description of your fish and the story of how they came to look the way they do.
