

The One-Pager Cover Expectations

Description/Explanation: A one-pager is a comprehensive response to your learning experience. It is a way to make your own unique statement about what you have learned. It is a way to be creative, experimental, and it allows you to respond imaginatively while being brief and concise.

Purpose: The purpose of the one-pager is to own what you have read. Our minds work better when we are asked to do something with what we are reading.

Connections: A one-pager connects verbal with visual. It connects the authors' thoughts to your own. It also makes connections between words and images.

Border	Title of unit at the top.
	In large letters, scatter 5-7 key vocabulary words.
	Completely Colored! No white is showing.
Inside	3 visual images, drawn or cut from a magazine, that you think represent this unit.
	Create 2 higher-level questions related to the big ideas of the unit. Write the answers to your questions.
	Write a 3 or more sentence personal reflection about the unit. What do you think and why?
	3 important facts you think are important from the unit.
	Completely Colored! No white is showing.

Written work must be neat, legible, and organized!

